

Introducing Clare Feeney

Short introduction

Clare Feeney is a professional speaker, author and trainer who works with a wide range of different organizations.

Clare worked at Auckland University before walking out of that ivory tower and into the septic tank, to work in sewage disposal.

15 years ago she formed a 'boutique' environmental consultancy with some colleagues and became fascinated by the threats and opportunities where business and environment meet.

She is now focused on professional speaking and writing on business and the environment, drawing on over 20 years of experience, which she is now capturing in a series of books.

Clare has worked in factories, farms, rivers and big construction sites – but she got out of sewage treatment before she fell in – it's an occupational hazard!

Please join with me in welcoming Clare.